

UPI Photos

Everyone Pitches In To Help Clean Up After Oelwein's Tornado

Everyone is pitching in to clean up the rubble from buildings damaged Wednesday when a tornado struck the northeast Iowa community, leaving two dead. At left a member of a cleanup crew uses motorized equipment, while at right, a young Oelwein resident pitches in to help clean up the debris. Oelwein was sealed off to all traffic today. Volunteer workmen parked their cars in special lots outside the city and were bused into the downtown area. A curfew was in effect.

AP Photo

Chopper Fire Truck

Even though fire had already consumed Fiber, Inc. manufacturing plant on the old Vancouver shipyard site, this bucket-equipped helicopter doused the smoldering wreckage of the building. The chopper fills the bucket with water, flies over the fire, and dumps the water by pulling a lanyard.

Chiefs Confer

The Rev. Ralph Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership conference, right, and Chief Banyaca of the Hopi Nation, Orabi, Arizona, answer questions at a press conference shortly after Abernathy arrived in Albuquerque to lead the Poor People's rally Friday night.

UPI Photo

Light Snow

Light snow was reported in northwest Iowa early today and the weather bureau said there is a chance of light snow mixed with rain in northeast Iowa tonight. Lows tonight are slated to be in the mid 30s. It will be cooler Sunday, with highs in the 40s, and occasional rain.

GRIN AND BEAR IT

By Lichty

... As I get it, the big issue seems to be which issue is the big issue!"